

A MOTHER'S TEARS.—There is a sweetness in a mother's tears when they fall on the face of a dying babe, which no eye can behold with heart untouched. It is holy ground upon which the unhallowed foot of profanity dares not encroach. Infidelity itself is silent and forbears her mocking; and here woman shows not her weakness, but her strength—it is strength of attachment, which man never can feel. It is perennial, dependent on no climate, no change nor soil, but alike in storms as in sunshine, it knows no shadow of turning. A father when he sees his child going down the dark valley may weep when the shadow of death has fully come over him, and as the last departing knell falls on his ears, may say: "I will go down to the grave for my son in mourning," but he turns away; in the hurry of business, the tear is wiped, and though when he returns to his fireside, the sportive laugh comes up to his remembrance, the succeeding day blunts the poignancy of his grief, and it finds no permanent seat. Not so with her who has borne and nursed the tender blossom. It lives in the heart where it was first entwined in the dreary hours of night. She sees its playful mirth, or hears its plaintive cries; she "seeks in the morning," and she goes to the grave to weep there. Its little toys are carefully laid aside as mementoes to keep continually alive that thrilling anguish which the dying struggle and sad look produced; and though grief, like a canker worm, may be gnawing at her vitals, yet she finds a luxury in her tears, and sweetness in her sorrow, which none but a mother ever tasted.

YANKEE GIRLS.—I love to meet a Yankee girl, let it be where it will, more especially when west of the Hudson, for then her pure simplicity of word and action contrasts so amiably with the constrained manner of too many among us, whose heads and hearts have been spoiled by an artificial state of society. She generally speaks what she thinks, nor is she fearful of thinking independently either; her actions, though free, never go beyond the strictest rule of propriety; and the most fastidious, who may at first imagine her imprudent, soon become assured that she is less erratic in thought than the mincing prude, who chides her niece of fifteen for smiling with unconstrained open-heartedness in the face of her cousin who has just returned from abroad.—I feel as if I had just emerged from the confined air of a city into a pure breezy atmosphere, whenever I find myself in the society of a genuine Yankee girl, who has moved in good society and possesses a cultivated mind. The most excellent traits which I have observed in the Yankee girl, are her evenness of disposition and her fine flow of spirits.—You always find her the same, see her where you will or when you will; and you are never at a loss to understand her, for she has none of the low tricks which have become too fashionable among too many young ladies, who are constantly in their social intercourse with our sex, engaged in fighting under false colors, until we are obliged to turn about and in mere self protection, become as great hypocrites as themselves.—Phil. Paper.

The editor of the Chicago Democrat having been made a Colonel, delivers an inaugural speech, of which the following is the conclusion:

"For the present, fellow citizens one and all, rest secured in your property, your homes and your families! For I have unsheathed my sword, and it never will be sheathed again until your last enemy shall be trampled under my feet. But I may die with it in my hands; if so, I shall die as proudly and as bravely as a Crockett. And in that event, I pray you take good care of my horse, and don't let Capt. Hunter steal my pistols."

Dr. Franklin said, "when I see a house well furnished with books and newspapers, there I see intelligent and well informed children; but if there are no books or papers, the children are ignorant if not profligate."

Just so. The doctor was a sensible man. A newspaper in every family—a Bible in every family—and a school in every district—all valued and studied as they deserve to be—are the principal supports of sound and civil liberty.—N. E. Farmer.

An Offer of Honor, not of Profit.—In a recent debate in the Legislature of Illinois on the propriety of reducing the salaries of certain officers, Mr. Henderson said that "the Circuit Judges were so poorly paid that they were compelled when on the circuit to swap horses and gamble in order to support their families."—Southron

An Irishman sold a horse warranted "without fault." The buyer found him stone blind, and complained accordingly. "By my sowl!" said Pat, "but that's not his fault, it's only his misfortune, sure."

A hatter at the North gives a very clever definition of the common phrase, "over head and ears in debt." He says in his advertisement, it means a man hasn't paid for his hat!

THE CAPITOL OF CHINA.—Pekin is in the province Pe-che-lee. This province is extremely sandy and by no means fertile, says Gutzlaff. The coast is exceedingly flat, destitute of good harbors and bordered by extensive shoals, which render navigation very difficult. Peking (or Peking as some times written) stands almost in the Northeast corner of China, and is only 40 miles from the great wall. It cannot be less than 150 miles from the mouth of the river on which it stands. Teen-tsin, on the same river (the Peh) about 75 miles below Peking is a great commercial city, said to contain 700,000 inhabitants.

Edward Kendall, the celebrated bugle player, left Boston on the 1st inst. in the steam ship Acadia for England. Good judges say that he has no equal on either side of the water. The Acadia had 62 passengers.

The wisest of mankind have their lapses of discretion.

The new Secretary of the navy.—A correspondent of the National Intelligencer says: Mr. Badger is justly regarded as one of the very ablest lawyers in the United States. He rarely ever speaks longer than one hour on any subject, and in that space of time he will do ample justice to his client, and often demolish a three days speech, of his adversary. When that accomplished scholar and profound jurist, Wm. Gaston was at the bar, Mr. Badger, though a much younger man, was his formidable rival. If I had a cause in any court in the United States, I would as soon employ George E. Badger as any lawyer in America. During the last war, when the British invader the eastern shores of North Carolina, Gov. Hawkins, with a large number of volunteer militia, marched quickly to the defence of the seaboard. In that expedition, George E. Badger, then about 19 years old, volunteered, was appointed by Major General Jones one of his aids, and remained in the public service until the enemy retreated took water and sailed from North Carolina.

A Good Story.—The "Spy in Washington," who is always cracking excellent jokes, tells the following good'un in one of his late letters: Mr. —, a Representative from Virginia, was taken ill. His physicians after a few days attendance, expressed apprehensions that he would not recover. Mr. — continuing to grow worse, sent for a friend, to whom he communicated the apprehensions of his physician, and then said in a solemn manner: "Now my friend, I have a favor to ask; if I should die, do not let me be buried at the expense of Congress, for by G—, it is unconstitutional."

Good.—An Arkansas editor has invented an excellent dun: he tells his subscribers that he has just printed a very neat receipt, and invites them to call and examine it.—Pic.

DIFFICULTIES WITH ENGLAND.—Affairs with England assume rather a serious aspect. The people of Cleveland have held a meeting on the subject, and hold very strong language. Among other resolutions are the following: Resolved, That the doctrines of Mr. Fox, that the orders of a government should excuse a subject in the commission of a flagrant crime and outrage evinces a laxity of moral principle and a disregard for human liberty, when American freemen cannot but repudiate with scorn and contempt, however high the source from whence they emanate. Resolved, That the determination of our sister state of New York to try, and if convicted, to execute McLeod, is one which the safety of the whole frontier demands, and which will receive if necessary the energies of the Union to maintain.

"In this country," says an English editor, "it is considered the height of folly for a man to get drunk and lie across a railroad with the idea of obtaining repose." The same opinion obtains to a considerable extent in America.
